SOUR STOMACH?

Blood Wine Cures It Instantly.

"Blood Wine" will sweeten a sour stomach the moment it touches it. It will stop the rising of gases, froth, sour or greasy juices, will overcome a feeling of nausea or enptiness, or as if a rock were lodged in the stomach. It will tone up the stomach and digestive organs and arouse the liver and bowels to healthy action. I have seen a man who suffered with dyspepsia for years, who couldn't eat anything without pain, sit down to a meal of baked beans and pork after he had taken two bottles of "Blood Wine," eat heartily and get up "Blood Wine," eat heartily and get up from the table without the slightest suggestion of any discomfort. BOILER MAKERS ARE STILL OUT

They are Well Behaved and Disposed to be Fair.

The Railroad Officials Declare That the Union Has Violated Its Agreement.

The strike inaugurated by the I. C. boilermakers yesterday has not been o general, many men refusing to strike while some who did, returned to work later in the day. The boilermakers here, however, have not returned to work and say they will not unless the order for the strike is countermanded by the executive committee in Chicago.

This morning Mr. H. C. McCourt, assistant general manager of southern lines of the road; Superintendent A. H. Egan, Roadmaster F. L. Thompson, of the Louisville division, Master Mechanic R. J. Turnbull and Traveling Engineer Lloyd Grimes held a conference in Master' Mechanic Turnbull's office and discussed

Mr. Egan stated this morning that the provisions of the agreement made with the boilermakers when the last increase was granted had been violated, and that as far as he could learn the strike was unauthorized inasmuch as the men had refused to strike at Evansville, Louisville, Central City and Jackson, Tenn., and other places. At Mattoon, Ill., and Memphis, Tenn., the men have returned to work. The following extract from the statement issued by Second Vice President J. T. Haraban explains this point:

"In the agreement which was made with the boilermakers on June 5, 1903, was the following provision: 'This agreement to take effect June 1, 1903, and remain in effect for one year and thereafter until thirty days notice shall have been given by either party desiring a change.' It will therefore in taking any action prior to July 1 is clearly a violation of the above provision of their agreement. It is unforenjoy; as well as being unfortunate the general business conditions of the country.

"The object of this statement is to et forth the position of the company, that all classes of employes may fully understand the situation."

Master Mechanic Turnbull stated that no trouble with the strikers here was anticipated and that all reports that they would likely cause any trouble were erroneous. The boilermakers met last night with Mr. H. McCourt and talked the matter over for more than two hours and promised to remain off the railroad property as long as unemployed by the company.

The boilermakers have no statement to make other than that they will remain out until the matter is settled one way or the other. The local beilereakers are simply acting on the orders of the executive committee but will hold out and not do lise others have done, they say, in Mattoon and Memphis, by returning to work.

The statement in brief made by Second Vice President Harahan is as fol-

THE WEATHER.

Partly cloudy tonight. Friday showers.

Former United States Senator Lindoften honored him, but with which he long ogo became disgusted: "What is the Democratic party today? Who is going to St. Louis to act solely for the to say of the convention is that it good of the party? Name me one man who is going there with first thought for Demogratic success, in spite of all thoughts of personal interest. It is hard to tell which is doing the greatest harm to Judge Parker's candidacy, Grover Cleveland or David B. Hill. I thought some months ago that Parker holes in the streets. would be the nominee but now I have grave doubts on that score. I think Cleveland is for him, but we all know Hill is for David B. Hill first, last and all the time."

City officials claim that none of the money paid for licenses illegally collected can be recovered by those who paid. This is probably a new principle of law discovered by the legal lights of the administration. Their view of what the law is, however, is usually the best argument that could be advanced of what the law is not Judge Reed, in his opinion on the city license ordinance, thus disposed of JUDGE SANDERS TAKES A VAthe city's argument in the case: "The argument in the brief of the city so licitor is so palpably erroneous, that it requires no counter argument." When the city's argument receives that kind of a rap from the presiding judge it seems foolish to talk of appeals.

The anti-machine Democrats in Kentucky had their balloon punctured, but the hot-air did no harm. It simply escaped and left them looking foolish. They didn't have half as many votes as the opposition, and their utter failure spells the political doom of many an ambitious politician. The anti-machine Democrats will never defeat the machine, because there are not enough of them in Ken-

There is one thing that makes Democrats in Kentucky tell the truth, if nothing else does. That is to fall out with the gang. Jo Blackburn said in a speech in the convention yesterday that "Beckham received 400 votes less last fall than be did against Yerkes.

ceived with Beckham's 26,000 majority, as the Republicans stayed at home. He declared therefore that the Democrats only had a margin of 5,000 rotes."

The opening gun of the '04 campaign was fired in Oregon, and it was heard all over the country. The two congressmen efected are Republicans, and they were elected after a hot campaign in which President Roosevelt was the issue. The result is most satisfactory to Republicans, for it indicates a large majority for President Roosevelt in November, not only in Oregon but in other states as well.

The world's fair is having its trou bles, -all kinds of them from the petty quarrels arising from jealousy and spite and the larger ones from the in evitable graft, to the gentle reminder from Uncle Sam that the four million, six hundred thousand will soon be due. Later on the cry will go up, 'what went with all the money?"

The Democrats who are wont to boast of their overwhelming strength in the First district must feel mighty small to see themselves ruthlessly run over by a few politicians. Democrats may run the politics of the district, but a few slick politicians run them, so they have very little to be proud of, after all.

Colorado doesn't have much prospect of peace as long as the union and non-union miners, the mine owners, the citizens' alliance, and the military are all bunched together. The government ought to throw open the state to civilized settlers after all the dynamite has been used up.

The Democrats of the First district will bave Colonel Mott Ayers, of Fulton, to bow down before for four years more. Perhaps by that time they may be free, as there will not be much left of the Democratic party then.

Russia may feel that she is having a rocky time of it in the far east, but she can console herself with the knowledge that she isn't in Colorado.

General Percy Haley's name didn't appear prominently in the convention reports. We fear Kentucky Democracy is on the down grade.

That fight Jo Blackburn beasted of making didn't materialize. The machine came sailing by and he simply THREE WERE HURT got out of the way.

Mr. Hearst now has more instructed votes than Judge Parker, and no Democrat has enough to win. It is still any body's race.

FOUNDRY COMPANY

Contractor Bailey, of Government Building Files Suit.

Claims the Failure of Owensboro Concera to Furnish Material Dam aged Him $2,694.89.

BUILDING GREATLY DELAYED

Mr. W. H. Bailey, the contractor of the addition to the government building today filed suit in circuit court against the Southern Foundry Co., of Owensboro, for $2,694.89 damages for breach of contract.

The petition is lengthy and itemizes every expense incurred by failure of the defendant to comply with its contract with the plaintiff. The total amount of damages estimated in the petition aggregates $5,329.95 but the price paid the foundry company for furnishing material amounting to $2,-635, was deducted from the total damages leaving a balance of $2,-

Contractor Bailey contracted to build the addition and in turn let a sub contract to the defendant to furnish all the iron and steel work. He claims the material was to be delivered in thirty days, but was several months getting here. It delayed him over three months and after it was put up, was discovered to be incorrectly made and alteration had to be made which costs a great deal additional.

For the damages in engaging extra men in taking down the iron after it has been placed in position, for damage to material and equipment by reason of exposure to the weather during the winter months, and various other losses, the plaintiff sues for the above

Hort.

There was a street car collision as Ninth and Jackson streets shortly three persons were injured and both cars damaged considerably. The cause of the accident is attributed to the fast running of Motorman Hall, who was in charge of the depot car, and who ran into the Jackson street

The cars which collided were Nos. 101, Motorman M. L. Hall, Conductor Pate Graves, and 62, in charge of Motorman J. M. Carnahan. The Jackson street car was making a "show trip" and also was the depot line car. Both were going rather fast, but the No. 101 running a little faster than the smaller car which was struck in the middle and knocked off the track. Windows were smashed and the passengers scattered about the cars. Mr. W. T. Houser and wife and Mr. Joe Wooldrdge were injured, but Mrs Houser is the only passenger who seemed to have been seriously hurt. She was unconscious for several hours after the accident. Wooldridge was standing on the back of the smaller car and was knocked off and under the car. His back was bruised but he is not seriously injured. Mr. Houser ecsaped with slight bruises.

The cars were taken to the street car shed today for repairs and it will require several days to patch them up

Later developments show that Miss Nellie Grassham, who lives with ber sister, Mrs. Check Davidson, of South 10th street, was also injured in the smashup. Her eyes were both bruised, nose skinned and knee bruised.

It was the sequel to other proceed ings instituted by Alderman Meehan at the former meeting of the council, which called for a report from the city attorney and ordinance committee regarding the legality of purchasing supplies of the city from an official of the city government. This proceeding had special reference to the claims of Winter Bros. for ice and of the Delta City Coal company (Alderman Nellis) for coal. Both came up at the meet ing of the council three weeks ago. It was known then that the report of the city attorney and committee with respect to the purchase of supplies, declared it clearly unlawful for any city official to be concerned therein.

A Suggestion for Prudent Men

To the average man he or ten dollars a month saved appears too in significant to pay for the effort, vet a laying aside of ten dollars each month and the judicious investment of it may prove the beginning of a fortune.

These ends are accomplished through the LEVEL PREMIUM SIX-YEAR BONDS of the Southern Mutual Investment Company of Lexington, Kentucky, which specifies the length of the investment period, seventy-four months, consequently the company way buy longer term securities than savings banks, which pay larger profits and are at the same time just as safe. The Southern Mutual Investment Company distributes all earnings amongst investors in proportion to their investments. Furthermore, this company investors, in proportion to their investments. Furthermore, this company handles only the safest securities, taking no speculative chances, so that there is no possibility of loss to the bondholder, and he is further protected by the company's deposit of $100,000 with the Kentucky State Treasurer; by the facts that all officers and employes are heavily bonded in Fidelity Companies, and the business is controlled by state laws and under the

One unusually attractive feature of the Level Premium Six-Year Bond is that the redemption of coupons during the term of the coutract secures an income to the bondholder, which, of course, may be compounded by reinvesting-a thing not accomplished under any other form of installment investment.

Men in any station of life may buy these bonds, and every one receives returns in absolute proportion to the size of the investment. The bond may be paid for by monthly installments of as little as $2,25, and any multiple of $2.25 may be invested.

This company, with its past experience and present earnings as criteria, estimates that on a net investment of $7.40 (extending over a period of seventy-four months) in this bond, the holder should receive a profit of > Mr. Henry Cornillaud, the gardener, had on the market yesterday the most peculiar flower ever seen by many of the older citizens. None of them knew what it was, and neither did Mr Cornillaud. It was a monster lily with a dark exterior and a dark. rich red interior. A large stem, coal black, shot up through it, and the velvety green of the leaves on the outside added to the barmonious attractiveness of the flower. Mr. Cornilland says that the plent has been in his yard for many years and it is the first time it ever bloomed except once many years ago, when it had a few small flowers on it, different from the ones now on it. There is no fragrance to the blooms, in fact they have a bad odor until cut, when they lose it.

A new industry, to this section at least, is the raising of peanuts. A fact which many of the farmers will learn of with some surprise is that a number of Paducah's country land holders have the past few weeks "put in" good sized crops of peanuts and are now awaiting their growth and maturity with deep interest. The 'idea" Mrs. Gue Quante, wife of a former is the result of the efforts of the mannas for several years been doing business in this place to introduce the industry of nut raising in this section. The offer was held out to supply them with seed nuts and to take their entire crops at the best figures, and the ber of acres in the popular "roaster." If the crops turn out half as well as is promised and the revenue results are accordingly next year will no doubt see the crop of this year more than quadrupled. The Sun gets it from a source reliable that fully one hundred acres within McCracken county are thing never heard of before in this section, as to the equal number of square yards even. The same authority in its infancy as to what it will be within the next few years, as the nut s growing in demands for the use in making cheap coffees, for use in making cocoa, and for making so-called olive oil. He declares the nut not only a profitable but a demanding "crop," an i hence his declaration as to its future importance to the land holders even of this section of the states.

NAPOLEON, As Seen by His Associates

NAPOLEON AND THE WOMEN

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

N a chat one day at St. Helena sephine, tells of an episode which came with the English bred physician under her observation. She says: who attended him in exile, Dr. O'Meara, Napoleon spoke of the custom among Englishmen of allowing the ladies to go away from the table and remaining for hours to drink and litical, partly social, for the queen of tested that the men remained more for the sake of conversation than for wine. Napoleon professed to doubt this.

"It appears to me," said he, "that you do not pay regard enough to the ladies. If your object is to converse instead of to drink, why not allow them to be present? Surely conversation is never so lively or so witty as when ladies take a part in it. If I were an Englishat being turned out by the men to wait guzzling their wine. Now, in France and yet se society is nothing unless ladies are pres- devotion." ent. They are the life of conversation." Another view of Napoleon's as to woman's proper sphere is reported by Roederer, who served the empire as administrator:

Women had far better work with their needles than with their tongues. especially if they are going to mix in politics. A state is lost when a woman manages its public affairs. France perished through a queen. Look at Spainthe queen governs there. For my part. if my wife wishes a thing it is a reason for me to do the contrary."

That princess, who was the king's second wife, without being very beautiful, was of an elegant figure and pleasing though dignified manners. I think the emperor pretended to be in love with her. The lookers on said it was amusing to watch the struggle between his imperious temper and rude manners and the desire to please a princess accustomed to that kind of etiquette which is never relaxed in woman I should feel very discontented Germany on any occasion whatever. Yet at times Napoleon was the reverse of gallant, according to this same authority, from whose memoirs the above extract and the one following are taken:

"The emperor, who was convinced that the influence of women had harmed the kings of France, was irrevocably resolved that they should never be more than an ornament to his court, and he kept his resolution. He had persuaded himself, I know not bow, that in France women are cleverer than men, or at any rate he often said so, The wife referred to was Josephine. and that the education they receive de-with regard to woman on the social side. He had strong likes and dislikes, which he expressed with his usual candor. To Josephine he wrote, in 1806, ten years after marriage:

"My Josephine-I have received your letter in which you seem vexed with bulletin of 1806 he wrote: me for the nasty things which I say about women. It is true that I hate burg would prove, were proof neces intriguing women more than anything. I am accustomed to women who are good, sweet, correlliating-the sort of women that I like. It is not my fault if they have spoiled me. It is your fault. And, besides, you will see that I have acted very kindly toward one who showed herself sensible and good. You see that I am fond of good, naive and gentle women. But it is true that those are the only women who are like you.

The Duchesse d'Abrantes, who knew Napoleon intimately all his life, gives testimony as to the manner of women who pleased him offhand. She says:

"I have known women, and I have a right to place myself among the number, who preserved in his presence a dignity of manner which pleased him better than silly fear or base flattery. When he made an unpleasant speech to a lady and it was received with respect and spirit, he never returned to ice. the charge. For myself, when I have offended him, he has often passed me at two or three successive court circles without speaking, but he never said a word which could wound my feelings."

And the great emperor would stoop to conquer when one of the fair sex was coy and yet attracted him. Says Mme. de Metternich, wife of the Austrian minister, in a letter to her hus-

"At the last reception I played cards with the emperor. He began by praising my diamonds and my everlasting gold gown."

Girardin, the soldier and statesman, tells in his "Journal" that he had been present at a supper after which "the emperor said something pretty to each of the women present. Under such cireunstances his smile is charming."

Bearing upon this phase of Napoleon's demegnor, Mme. de Remusat,

These two utterances mark the exvelops a certain kind of ability against tremes in Napoleon's general attitude which one must be on one's guard. He which one must be on one's guard. He felt, therefore, a slight fear of them

"The papers discovered at Charlottensary, how unbappy are princes who allow women any influence in political matters." The ink was barely dry upon this when be wrote Josephine in praise of "good, naive and gentle women."

And yet, both as a tyro and as an adept in governing, he called to his aid the influence of women. In 1814 it happened that Marshal Augereau showed some weakness in his command. The emperor wrote to King Joseph:

"I have written to the Duke Cas-tiglione (Augereau). I have told the empress to speak to his wife. I think you had better speak to him also and make the ladies in waiting speak to him. He must do as I do and maintain his reputation." At the height of his splendor, in 1805, the year of Austerlitz, he condescended to ask for the intervention of the wife of an officer in the interests of the serv-

"I believe," he wrote to the minister of marine, "that Mme. Missiessy is a sensible woman, with some ambition. Ask her to start for Rochefort. It is right that Admiral Missiessy should see his wife, and let her make him understand that it is his duty to go through the campaign."

Count Las Cases, another chronicler of the exile at St. Helena, states that one day Napoleon spoke of the caprices of women in the presence of the ladies of his little court.

"Nothing," said he, "more clearly indicates rank, education and good breeding among them than evenness of temper and the constant desire to please." He added that they were bound by circumstances to show themselves at all times mistresses of themselves and to be always attending to their part on

A Missouri Judge

It does not always pay to appear too independent, especially in a courtroom. They are telling the following story on a former Missourian, who is now a judge in Oklahoma: A gambler was tried before the judge recently and convicted of playing poker. He appeared in court dressed in flashy style and with plenty of money in his pockets, apparently unconcerned as to the outcome of his trial. Looking over his spectacles, the judge in a squeaky voice said:
"Jim, stand up."

obeyed. "Jim, have you anything to say before I pass sentence on you?"

"No, sir." "Jim, I'm a-goin' to fine you $50-"All right, judge," interrupted the gambler, "here it is in my hip pocket."

"And give you sixty days in jail," continued the judge. "Now, look and see if you've got that in your hip pocket, too."—Kansas City Star.

When Trees Were Valued.

Harry C. Piercy, member of the Republican Club House Committee, overheard an amusing conversation at the ladies' reception in the new club house last week. How Champ Clark Won Precinct by Daring Rejoinder. Congressman Champ Clark usually manages to take pretty good care of himself, whatever the circumstances. During one of his campaigns in Miseouri he struck an exceptionally hastile neighborhood. He had been subjected to several interruptions, and finally a burly fellow strode down to the front of the platform and said: "Say, you're a d--- fool, and everybody here knows it!" Clark's face actually became radiant at this announcement. He leaned over, and before the bewildered spectator who had hurled the epithet could think, seized his hand and wrung it warmly. Then, facing his audience squarely, said: "The remark of my friend here has given me renewed encouragement. If before I had any shadow of doubt as rousing majority." Clark afterward said he knew he was taking long chances. But the audience went wild over the rejoinder. and the Congressman really did carry the precinct when election day rolled around.—Baitimore Herald.
